IS SMALL CLAIMS COURT YOUR BEST OPTION?

Before filing a small claims case, it's important to decide whether small claims court is the best place to resolve your dispute. Many disputes can be resolved by using other dispute resolution methods, such as mediation. Mediation is a procedure for resolving disputes informally; a third party (a mediator) helps the parties arrive at their own solution. Unlike a judge, a mediator doesn't issue a decision. One advantage of the mediation process is that it attempts to restore the relationship between the parties. While only some disputes can be resolved through mediation (since both parties must agree to the results), consider whether your dispute can be resolved that way. Disputes involving neighbors and family members are particularly well suited for mediation because of the relationship between the parties. If you decide that mediation (rather than small claims court) might resolve the dispute, you should call RECURSE Mediation Services, 2455 Bennett Valley Road, Suite B107, Santa Rosa, CA 95404 at (707) 525-8545.

If you decide to file a small claims court case, be prepared to devote some time and effort to it. This includes preparing for the hearing, gathering evidence, meeting with witnesses, and attending the hearing. You also may need to take action and spend money to enforce any judgment.

SUING A BUSINESS OR CORPORATION

When suing a business or corporation it is extremely important that you use the defendant's exact legal name. Also, if defendant is a corporation, you may only serve certain persons such as the registered agent for service of process or a corporate officer. In order to determine who you must serve, you may need to check one or more of the following resources. For additional suggestions, contact the Small Claims Legal Adviser.

- The fictitious business name desk at the County Clerk's Office (if the person or business is required to register), 2300 County Center Drive, Suite B177, Santa Rosa;
- The business license desk of the city in which the business is located if that city requires a business license;
- Secretary of State to obtain corporate status, including the name of the registered Agent for Service of Process (see list of Web sites below);
- Other state agencies if the business requires a special license to operate (see list of Web sites below);
